From Our Pastor

Dear Parishioners,

In the Eastern Churches, both Catholic and Orthodox, and in the Archdiocese of Milan that celebrates the Ambrosian Rite, Advent is six weeks long. In the East it is called the Nativity Fast, and neither meat nor fish can be consumed for most of it. The fasting rules get stricter as Christmas approaches. Christmas Eve, or the Vigil of the Nativity, usually has the strictest fast assigned to their Advent. Even in the Latin West up until recently, Christmas Eve was observed as a fast day, and Italians often consumed a seven-fish soup and meal before going off to Midnight Mass, which was the first Mass of Christmas.

The weakening of Advent as a penitential season in the West actually started under Pope St Gregory the Great in the sixth century, when he shortened Advent by two weeks. Interestingly enough, much of the hymnody in the Divine Office and the formularies of the Mass for Advent seems to have come from him. Much of Europe, however, still observed a kind of six-week season before Christmas beginning with the Feast of St Martin on 11 November. This forty-day Martinmas/Nativity Fast was a parallel to Lent. France actually kept five weeks of Advent well into the 14th century.

The liturgical reform in 1969 introduced two innovations into Advent. The first was that liturgists no longer referred to it as a penitential season, even though the purple vestments were retained. It was to be a season of expectation, not mortification, and all fasting was abolished. The Gloria was still omitted. The second was the composition of new Mass texts for each of the Greater Ferias of Advent, the nine days before Christmas, seven of which correspond to the O Antiphons for the Magnificat in the Divine Office of Vespers. This basically created a season within the season of Advent that corresponded to this time.

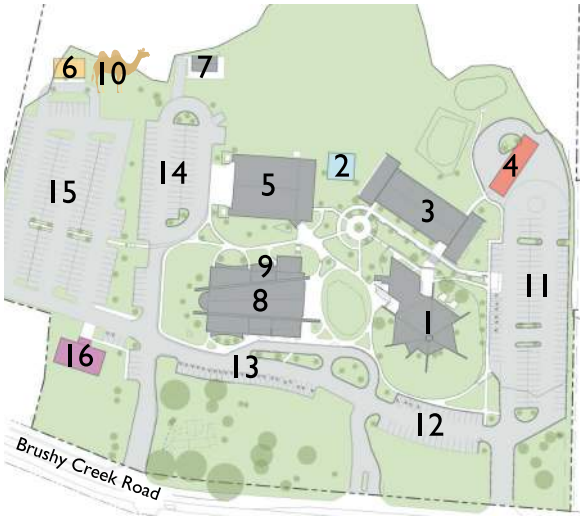

In the ancient Church, the liturgy was very conservative during the penitential seasons. Before the dalmatic for the deacon and the tunicle for the subdeacon were adopted and the chasuble reserved for the priest alone, Christians of every sort wore a kind of chasuble that was not unlike what the priest wears at Mass today as his outermost vestment. Deacons and subdeacons would fold or cut the front of the chasuble, and their usage persisted during Advent and Lent until 1955, when Pope Pius XII's new version of Holy Week put them in abeyance.

At Prince of Peace, we still observe the older customs of Advent and Lent for the sacred liturgy: no organ outside of what is necessary to sustain congregational singing, no flowers, no relics on the altars, silver altar appointments instead of gold, folded chasubles at Latin Mass. We encourage everyone to join us for the candlelight Rorate Masses at 6.30a on Saturday morning, especially the Solemn High Mass for Our Lady of Guadalupe on 12 December, as well as Sunday Night Prayer, or Compline, sung in English at 7p.

The church will gradually become prepared for Christmas, and please let Ed Carl know if you can help us. I think there is something particularly beautiful about parishioners coming together to deck the halls so everyone can enjoy the season. The Nativity is up, but Baby Jesus won't go in until Christmas Eve. On the second Sunday of Advent, don't forget to bring your Baby Jesus to be blessed at Mass. The third Sunday of Advent, Gaudete Sunday, is Rose Sunday, when we bless expectant mothers and relax what are supposed to be the rigors of penance for a day. So mark your calendars and join us for it all!

Canon Christopher Smith

On the Cover: The Advent wreath marks the Church's four weeks of preparation for Christmas. Its evergreen branches symbolize everlasting life, while the four candles represent the Sundays of Advent. Three violet candles reflect the season's penitential character, and the rose candle is lit on the Third Sunday, Gaudete Sunday, as Christmas draws near. With each passing week, the growing light reminds us of Christ, the Light of the World.
